

Redistributive Human Rights? Workshop

Participant Biographies

Roland Burke is author of Decolonization and the Evolution of International Human Rights (University of Pennsylvania, 2010), and senior lecturer in World History at La Trobe University. His research is devoted to the history of human rights, including the shifting meaning and memorialization of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (Journal of Global History, International History Review, History & Memory), social rights (Humanity), and the intersection of decolonization and human rights (Journal of World History and Human Rights Quarterly). He is currently concluding a manuscript on dissents to the 1948 Universal Declaration, Human Rights in Eclipse.

Michelle Carmody is a lecturer in Latin American Studies at the University of Melbourne. She is an interdisciplinary scholar: she shares social scientists' interest in political processes, organisations and institutions, while emphasizing historians' concern for human agency, context, and contingency. Most of her work focuses on the Latin American context, but she is increasingly interested in looking at the region in international and comparative perspective, seeing how ideas and forms of action take different forms in different places. Her most recent research direction takes a comparative look at internationalism and how different national and local political traditions both shaped and were shaped by new forms of international organizing in the late 20th century.

Cheah Wui Ling is Assistant Professor at the Faculty of Law of the National University of Singapore (NUS). She obtained her academic qualifications from the National University of Singapore (LL.B., LL.M.), Harvard Law School (LL.M.), European University Institute, and Oxford University (D.Phil). In 2016 and 2017, she was awarded a USP teaching incentive award and a NUS Law Faculty Teaching Excellence Award. Prior to joining academia, she served as a Legal Officer at INTERPOL's Office of Legal Affairs (Lyon, France). Cheah W.L.'s research focuses on accountability for human rights violations and mass atrocities. Her work has been published in journals such as the European Journal of International Law, Leiden Journal of International Law, Harvard Human Rights Journal, Journal of International Criminal Justice, and International Journal of Law in Context. She is also co-founder (with Ms Ng Pei Yi) of the Singapore War Crimes Trials Web Portal (<http://www.singaporewarcrimetrials.com/>).

Caroline Compton works in the field of law and society, with a particular focus on humanitarian practice, property relations, natural disaster, and climate change and adaptation. She is presently a Postdoctoral Research Associate on the Australian Research Council-funded project 'Data Science in Humanitarianism: Confronting Novel Law and Policy Challenges'. Her previous doctoral work, completed at the Australian National University, looked at the inter-legality of regulation in the post-disaster context, specifically the shelter recovery following Typhoon Haiyan in the Philippines. Caroline has published in Critical Asian Studies and NYU Journal of International Law and Politics. Caroline received an Endeavour Postgraduate Scholarship to undertake doctoral fieldwork in the Philippines. She has been a Visiting Research Associate at the Institute of Philippine Culture at Ateneo de Manila University, a Visiting Researcher at the University of Coimbra, and spent the 2017-8 US academic year at Yale University as a Fox Fellow.

Holly Cullen is an Adjunct Professor of Law at the University of Western Australia, having been Professor of Law from 2010-2016. Previously, she was Reader in Law at Durham University and Deputy Director of the Durham European Law Institute from 1998–06, also serving as Acting Director in 2003–04. She is the author of The Role of International Law in the Elimination of Child Labor (Brill, 2007) and numerous articles on international human rights law, international organizations and theory of international law. Her research on child labour and on legal reasoning in economic and social rights cases was funded by the United Kingdom Arts and Humanities Research Council. She was a member of the International Law Association's research committee on Non-State Actors in International Law and is a founding member of the UWA Modern Slavery Research Network.

Julia Dehm is a Lecturer at La Trobe University School of Law. Her research addresses international climate change law and regulation, transnational carbon markets and the governance of natural resources as well as the relationships between human rights and the environment and human rights and inequality. Prior to starting at La Trobe Julia was a Postdoctoral Fellow at the Rapoport Center for Human Rights and Justice at the University of Texas in Austin and a Resident Fellow at the Harvard Law School Institute for Global Law and Policy. Julia is the Managing Editor of the Journal of Human Rights and the Environment and a member of the Global Network for the Study of Human Rights and the Environment.

Anna Delius is a PhD candidate at the Friedrich-Meinecke-Institute for History and Cultural Studies at Freie Universität Berlin and a fellow of the Joint Interdisciplinary Doctoral Program "Human Rights Under Pressure" (FU Berlin, HU Jerusalem). In her doctoral project, Anna analyzes and compares how oppositional labor activists discussed repression and rights in alternative press publications in Francoist Spain and in state socialist Poland (1960-90). From 2012-2015, she has been working as a research associate at the Institute of Sociology at the FU Berlin conducting a study on collective memories in Germany, Poland Spain and the UK that has been published in 2016. Her research interests include contemporary European history, the history of human rights and social movements, memory studies and Holocaust studies.

Rosalind Dixon is a Professor of Law, at UNSW Sydney whose work focuses on comparative constitutional law and constitutional design, constitutional democracy, theories of constitutional dialogue and amendment, socio-economic rights and constitutional law and gender. She is co-editor, with Tom Ginsburg, of a leading handbook on comparative constitutional law, Comparative Constitutional Law (Edward Elgar, 2011), and a related volume, Comparative Constitutional Law in Asia (Edward Elgar, 2014), and Comparative Constitutional Law in Latin America (2017), co-editor (with Mark Tushnet and Susan Rose-Ackermann) of the Edward Elgar series on Constitutional and Administrative Law, on the editorial board of the Public Law Review, and editor of the Constitutions of the World series for Hart publishing. She previously served as an assistant professor at the University of Chicago Law School and has been a visiting professor at the University of Chicago, Columbia Law School, Harvard Law School and the National University of Singapore, and is currently co-president of the International Society of Public Law: <https://www.icon-society.org/>

Jackie Dugard is an associate professor at the School of Law, University of the Witwatersrand, where she lectures Property Law, Constitutional Law and Critical Jurisprudence. With a background in social sciences and law, Jackie has published widely on the role of law and courts in social change, as well as on socio-economic rights, access to courts, protest and social movements, property law and Gender-Based Harm. Jackie is on the editorial committee of the South African Journal on Human Rights (SAJHR). She was a co-founder and the first executive director (2010-2012) of the Socio-Economic Rights Institute of South Africa (SERI), where she is a member of the Board. Jackie was the founder and first director of the Gender Equity Office (GEO) at the University of the Witwatersrand (2014-2016). She holds a BA (Hons) (Wits), MPhil (Cantab), PhD (Cantab), LLM (Essex), LLB (Wits).

Marco Duranti is Senior Lecturer in Modern European and International History at the University of Sydney. His research focuses on the history of international law and organisations, above all in the domain of human rights and European integration. He has recently published, The Conservative Human Rights Revolution: European Identity, Transnational Politics, and the Origins of the European Convention (Oxford UP, 2017).

Souheir Edelbi is a PhD candidate at UNSW Law, focusing on the International Criminal Court's (ICC) activities in Africa, in particular, Kenya and Libya. Her research examines the temporal and spatial narratives surrounding the ICC's cornerstone principle, complementarity, and how Third World states are cast and recast as 'others' in textual productions of international criminal law. Souheir previously worked in the Occupied Palestinian Territory in East Jerusalem and the West Bank, assisting local civil society organisations on housing, land and residency issues. Following her work in Palestine, she took up a role with the Unrepresented Nations and Peoples Organization, a Brussels-based NGO - unrelated to the UN - documenting violations of minority rights in Iraq and Iran. Prior to that, Souheir worked as a solicitor in insurance litigation in Sydney.

James C Fisher is a Project Associate Professor in the Faculty of Law & Graduate Schools for Law and Politics at the University of Tokyo, Japan (having studied at the Universities of Oxford, Leiden and Utrecht). His primary teaching and research interests are in comparative private law and private law theory, working additionally on constitutional and human rights law in Japan and wider East Asia.

Ben Golder is an Associate Professor of Law and the Associate Dean (Education) in the Faculty of Law, UNSW. He works at the intersection of critical legal theory and political theory and is the author of numerous journal articles and books, including Foucault and the Politics of Rights (Stanford University Press, 2015). He is currently working on a book project about critiques of human rights.

Randi Irwin is a PhD Candidate in Anthropology at The New School for Social Research in New York. Her doctoral research is focused on the struggle for Western Sahara's decolonization, led by the Saharawi state in-exile from a refugee camp in Algeria. Her research focuses specifically on the role of natural resources in mediating knowledge production, territorial rights, formations of citizenship, and legality. Randi's dissertation research was funded by the National Science Foundation and The New School for Social Research's Dissertation Fellowship. She is currently a board member for the Association of Political and Legal Anthropology in the United States.

Barbara Keys is Professor of U.S. and International History at The University of Melbourne. She began her teaching career in 2003 after receiving her Ph.D. in History from Harvard University, where she studied under Akira Iriye and Ernest May. In 2019 she will serve as the President of the Society for Historians of American Foreign Relations.

Coel Kirkby is a Lecturer at Sydney Law School. He was elected the Smuts Research Fellow in Commonwealth Studies at the University of Cambridge for 2017-8. Before that he was a McKenzie Fellow at Melbourne Law School and Endeavour Fellow at UNSW. Coel has recently completed a monograph that examines the ideology, institutions and politics of 'native' status across the British Empire over the nineteenth century. He has two new projects. The first is an intellectual history of Anglo-American jurisprudence in the context of empire and its aftermath. The second is a study of the networks of constitution-making that connects postcolonial Africa, Asia and the Pacific.

Anthony J. Langlois is a critical human rights theorist with a focus on sexuality and gender rights. He is an Associate Professor in International Relations at Flinders University, Adelaide, Australia, where he is also the Government Teaching Program Director for the College of Business, Government and Law. He was educated at the University of Tasmania and the Australian National University. Langlois is the author of The Politics of Justice and Human Rights: Southeast Asia and Universalist Theory (Cambridge University Press, 2001) and Co-Editor of Global Democracy and its Difficulties (Routledge 2009) and Australian Foreign Policy: Controversies and Debates (Oxford University Press, 2014). As well as being published in many scholarly journals, he sits on the editorial board of The Journal of Human Rights. His areas of academic endeavour include Human Rights Theory, International Relations, Global Sexuality Politics, International Political Theory and Global Ethics.

Dylan Lino is a Lecturer at the University of Western Australia Law School. He researches on constitutional law and theory, the rights of Indigenous peoples and legal history. His book Constitutional Recognition: First Peoples and the Australian Settler State was recently published by Federation Press.

Zachary Manfredi received his JD from Yale Law School in 2017 and is currently a PhD candidate at UC Berkeley. While at Yale he was a Hansell Fellow at the Center for Global Legal Challenges and a member of the Worker and Immigrant Rights Advocacy Clinic. He also holds an MPhil in Political Theory from Oxford University, where he studied as a Rhodes Scholar and co-founded of the International Criminal Court Observers Project. His dissertation, "Humanity in Ruins? Liberal Disillusion and the Left Critique of Human Rights," explores twentieth-century conceptualizations of international human rights in socialist and post-colonial political thought. His recent work has appeared or is forthcoming in Humanity, The Texas Law Review, The Texas Journal of International Law, and Critical Times. He currently serves as a law clerk to the Honorable Justice Goodwin Liu of the California Supreme Court.

Daniel McLoughlin is a Senior Lecturer in the Faculty of Law at the University of New South Wales. Daniel is a legal theorist working in the critical and continental traditions of thought. He has published on sovereignty, political ontology, government, and political crises, with a particular emphasis on the work of Giorgio Agamben and Carl Schmitt. His other research interests include Marxist state theory, the politics and theory of human rights, public law theory, and the impact of neo-liberalism on the state. He is currently completing a book manuscript on Agamben's legal and political thought. He holds a PhD in Philosophy from UNSW and a Bachelor of Arts/Law from Macquarie University.

Ryan Mitchell is an Assistant Professor of Law at the Chinese University of Hong Kong. He received his J.D. from Harvard Law School, and his Ph.D. in Law from Yale University, where he was also a Mellon Foundation Humanities Fellow. His research focuses on public international law, legal history and theory, and Chinese law. His writing on these subjects has been published in leading academic journals including the Harvard International Law Journal and the Vanderbilt Journal of Transnational Law, and he is currently writing a book on Chinese approaches to sovereignty and international legal obligation that is forthcoming from Cambridge University Press.

Samuel Moyn is the Henry R. Luce Professor of Jurisprudence at Yale University. He has written several books in his fields of European intellectual history and human rights history, including The Last Utopia: Human Rights in History (Harvard University Press, 2010), and edited or coedited a number of others. His most recent book, Not Enough: Human Rights in an Unequal World, was published by Harvard University Press in April 2018.

Jon Piccini has written widely on social movements and human rights in Australia. His second book, Human Rights in Twentieth-Century Australia will appear with Cambridge University Press in 2019. Jon is a lecturer in history at Australian Catholic University, and previously undertook a postdoctoral research fellowship at The University of Queensland.

Kári Hólmur Ragnarsson is a doctoral student (SJD) at Harvard Law School. He received his law degree in 2009 from the University of Iceland and went on to practice law at Réttur – Aðalsteinsson & Partners in Reykjavík. In 2015 he completed the LLM program at Harvard with a concentration in international human rights. The title of his ongoing dissertation project is “Socio-economic Rights and Neoliberalism After the 2008 Financial Crisis”, under the supervision of Mark Tushnet, as well as working with Samuel Moyn and Gerald Neuman. The project focuses on the political-economic and distributional impact of different approaches to economic and social rights protections in constitutional and international law, with particular focus on European case-law on post-2008 austerity measures. Among his academic interests are law and political economy, comparative constitutional law and international and European human rights. Kári also teaches international human rights law at the University of Iceland.

Anna Saunders is a Teaching Fellow and MPhil candidate at Melbourne Law School. She researches across the fields of history and theory of international law, with a current focus on intervention and statebuilding. Her MPhil project is a history of enemy states in the early years of the United Nations. Anna is also a Senior Program Fellow with the Laureate Program in International Law and co-editor, with Anne Orford, Kathryn Greenman and Ntina Tzouvala, of a forthcoming volume on revolution and international law. Anna holds a JD (first class) from Melbourne Law School, a Bachelor of Arts (with honours) from the University of Adelaide, and is a former Editor of the Melbourne Journal of International Law. Prior to her MPhil she was a research assistant at Melbourne Law School in international law, constitutional law, and legal theory, and also worked in native title in Victoria.

Ntina Tzouvala is an ARC Postdoctoral Fellow in International Law at Melbourne Law School. Prior to coming to Melbourne she was a lecturer in law at Durham Law School (UK), where she also completed her PhD thesis. Her research concerns international law, with particular emphasis on history, theory, and the political economy of international law. Her first monograph, entitled Capitalism as Civilisation: A History of International Law, is forthcoming with Cambridge University Press.

Paul van Trigt is postdoctoral researcher in the ERC-project Rethinking Disability: the Impact of the International Year of Disabled Persons (1981) in Global Perspective at the Institute of History, Leiden University. He has published about the modern history of the welfare state, human rights, disability and religion. His monograph Blind in een gidsland (Blind in a guiding country) was published in 2013, he also edited and contributed to a special issue of the journal Social Inclusion about relations between disability and ‘being human’. Currently, he is working on a genealogy of the United Nations Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities.

Jessica Whyte is an a Scientia Fellow and Associate Professor in the School of Humanities and Languages (Philosophy) and the Faculty of Law, University of New South Wales and an Australian Research Council DECRA Fellow. She is a political theorist who has published widely on human rights, humanitarianism, and neoliberalism, and on contemporary European philosophy (especially Agamben and Foucault). Her first monograph, Catastrophe and Redemption: The Political Thought of Giorgio Agamben, was published by SUNY in 2013. Her forthcoming book, The Morals of the Market: Human Rights and the Rise of Neoliberalism will be published by Verso in 2019. She is currently working on project on the moral economy of warfare and the invention of “collateral damage”.